

REFERENCE STYLE GUIDE

General rules for reference style

Where a single date is given in square brackets in the Revised Register of Titles this is quoted in the Dictionary, e.g. BARB. Where a date range or [v.d.] (various dates) is given, e.g. T. HOPE Diary or BRUS, the actual date of the quotation is given wherever possible. Where scholarly research has led to alterations in the dating of individual texts throughout the period of compilation of the Dictionary, this has been recorded in this guide, e.g. Bute MS.

Where there is an author the name is given in small capitals. Lower case roman denotes the editor. In earlier volumes lower case roman is also used where the quotation is from material quoted by the author and not the author's own words. In later volumes, due to technological constraints, this practice was discontinued and small capitals have been used whether or not the quotation is the author's own words. In earlier volumes lower case was also used where the text widely diverges from the preferred text, e.g. the Cottonian and Wemyss texts of Wyntoun (see WYNT. entry), or where authorship is doubtful (see DUNB. entry). Where a text comprises the works of various authors, the names of those who can be identified precede the reference. In earlier volumes the style is e.g. STEWART Bann. MS, in later volumes the style is STEWART in Bann. MS.

The title of the work is given in italic in the form listed in the Revised Register of Titles. The convention of giving the title of a text 'in' another, e.g. Edinb. Skinners in Bk. Old Edinb. C. may be given whenever judged necessary. Bibliographic details for the source in which a text is to be found are included in the Revised Register of Titles, but such details of the text itself are not necessarily included.

Where more than one volume of a text is used, the volume number is given unless pagination is consecutive. Similarly, part number is given unless pagination is consecutive. Where only one volume is used and this is listed in the bibliography, the volume number is generally not given in the dictionary reference, e.g. Laing MSS.

Where there is more than one series, the series number is given from the second series onwards as 2 Ser., 3 Ser., etc.

Page number and line number or column number, where appropriate, are given. In printed editions, such as SKENE Reg. Maj., where the recto side of the page is numbered, the verso side is distinguished by the letter b; a (= recto) is usually omitted. In printed editions where page numbers are not given, e.g. BAILLIE Anabaptisme, reference is made using the printer's signature at the foot of the page. This is usually preceded in the reference by the abbreviation Sig. followed by a letter, a number (usually in roman numerals), and a or b (= recto or verso).

For manuscripts folio number is given as, e.g., 23a, 72b (where a = recto and b = verso); a may be omitted. In earlier volumes the abbreviation fol. for folio was included in some references but this practice is discontinued in later volumes unless absolutely necessary for clarity. The practice of using the letter p. before the page number of a manuscript is also discontinued in later volumes unless absolutely necessary for clarity.

Where a quotation can be taken either from the manuscript or from an edition, the edition is distinguished either by (ed.) or the publisher's name in brackets, e.g. BC (Bannatyne Club), STS (Scottish Text Society), SHS (Scottish History Society), Camden Soc. (Camden Society), OUP (Oxford University Press). Where this would present difficulties, e.g. in the case of Gilbert Hay's Prose Works where both editions are published by the STS, the editor of the most recent edition is given in brackets as HAY (Glenn) to distinguish it from the earlier edition. The abbreviation MS is latterly only given in references where an edition also exists and is no longer used where the text exists only in manuscript.

In the later volumes stops were removed from consecutive capital sequences, e.g. O.U.P., S.T.S., S.H.S. were altered to OUP, STS and SHS.

References to entries in other dictionaries and vocabularies (including SKENE Verb. S.) are given in the form s.v. Headword and the source dictionary is identified. In quotations from alphabetically arranged vocabularies such as Despauter, DUNCAN App. Etym. and WEDDERBURN Voc. the quotation is to be found by the Latin headword which is usually included in italics at the beginning of the quotation but may also be given s.v. Headword.

References which conform to the general style outlined above are not listed in this guide, which lists only those references which have been altered in some other way throughout the period of compilation of the Dictionary and those which are complex and require some explanation.

Full bibliographical details are given in the Revised Register of Titles.

[DOST vol XII p. ccxxxix]

Reference Structure

A reference is composed of four primary components: date, author/editor, title and mode of reference. This guide comprises references where one or more of these components has been altered in later volumes of the dictionary. Examples:

Date: Bk. Rates the date was originally given in the reference to distinguish the 1597 and 1612 texts. Later volumes refer to the former as Bk. Rates and the latter as Bk. Rates (Halyb.)

Author/editor: DOUG. K. Hart latterly believed to be not by Douglas and referred to as K.Hart.

Title Instit. Ct. Sess. [1565] In later volumes cited as Instit. Ct. Sess. in Edinb. Univ. MS La. III 388a + folio number, and subsequently changed to Edinb. Univ. MS La. III 388a + folio number.

Mode of reference: Boece originally referred to by book number, chapter number and folio number, in the later stages of the dictionary reference is by folio number only. Boece IV ii 87b is reduced to Boece 87b in later volumes.

Entry Structure in Reference Style Guide

Entries in this guide are structured as follows:

Short title (= short title in Revised Register of Titles) and chronological information.

Explanation of structure of reference. Any further note of explanation.

Example(s) of reference style.

Abbreviations are as used in the dictionary.

Aberd. B. Rec. [v.d.]

Quotations from MS: date, title, MS, volume number, part number if applicable, page, (day and month) or folio number.

1443 Aberd. B. Rec. MS IV 316 (27 Aug.).

1443 Aberd. B. Rec. MS 32a.

1447 Aberd. B. Rec. MS IV p. 473 (27 March).

1460 Aberd. B. Rec. MS V 1 p. 410 (18 Nov.).
